About the Speakers

Ariel Kramer, Chief Communications Officer at CELLINK has been working with communications and marketing for tech companies for the past eight years. She founded her own boutique PR/Marketing firm in 2013 and has served as the CCO of CELLINK, a Nasdaq listed 3D Bioprinting company since 2016. She was listed as one of the top 25 women in 3D Printing last year. Kramer has worked with companies all over the world helping them raise their visibility and establish a strong brand. Aside from her work with communications and marketing, she has written for top tier media outlets such as the Wall Street Journal, Business Insider and Huffington Post.

Elizabeth (Liz) Orwin, PhD, Engineering Department Chair at Harvey Mudd College is James Howard Kindelberger Professor of Engineering and department chair. She specializes in biomedical engineering. Orwin has worked for Gel-Del Technologies in St. Paul, Minn., on the research and development of a novel protein matrix for wound healing applications. She also directs the Engman Fellowship Program in Bioengineering, which trains students in Biomedical Engineering research and device design. Her lab’s main research focus is in the area of tissue engineering, specifically applied to the study and development of an artificial corneal construct.

Orwin also runs several industry-sponsored research projects involving tissue engineering and wound healing in skin and neural models. She is working to develop a “brain patch” for traumatic brain injury by harnessing regenerative medicine techniques and investigating novel combinations of cell source and scaffold materials to create a cell delivery system for neural tissue repair. Orwin’s lab also collaborates with Beckman Laser Institute on a device to measure nasal cartilage stiffness, as well as with Johns Hopkins University on the development of a device to simulate the forces involved in eye rubbing for keratoconus.

Jessica Rousset, Chief Operations Officer for CURE Pharmaceutical Corp., is an operational, business development and commercialization leader with more than 15 years of experience growing early stage technology companies as well as creating innovation engines in large organizations. She is expert in bridging academic, government and corporate interests toward the common goal of improving patient's lives through novel healthcare solutions. Above all, she believes in a mindful approach to leadership, focused on creating an honest and safe corporate culture that values thinking and embraces meaningful conflict.

At CURE Pharmaceutical, she oversees operations and drives corporate strategy and growth. She previously served as Head of Innovation at Children’s Hospital Los Angeles, where over a ten-year period, she helped launch both therapeutic and medical device companies and founded and operated a national pediatric technology accelerator. Prior to that, she held positions at The Scripps Research Institute and GlaxoSmithKline Biologicals in laboratory, clinical research and business development roles. She trained as a biochemical engineer at the Institut National des Sciences Appliquées in Lyon, France.

Linda Soo Hoo, PhD, Associate Director of Technical Services at Gilead Sciences has over eight years of industrial experience in various aspects of biopharmaceutical manufacturing, including CMC regulatory submissions, technology transfer of clinical products, development and validation of analytical methods, nanotechnology regulations and liposome technology. She received her PhD from the University of California at Santa Barbara in Molecular, Cellular, and Developmental Biology and a post-doctoral fellowship from NIH at UCLA working on biomarker discovery. She is an adjunct professor and an alumnus of the Post-doctoral Professional Masters in Bioscience Management at Keck Graduate Institute in Claremont. She has spoken at public events on topics of career development and various aspects of nanotechnology regulations. She has authored book and journal publications on nanotechnologies. She currently holds a Regulatory Affairs Certification, RAC (US). She is a current member of AAPS, ISPE and PDA and currently an active executive committee member of the Southern California Pharmaceutical Discussion Group (SCPDG), which hosts educational seminars to foster education in and knowledge of the pharmaceutical sciences, its industry and regulations.

Angela Swanton, Site General Manager at Teva Pharmaceuticals has over 15 years of experience, starting her career at Pfizer as a Director, working in the US and in Sweden.

She was the Supply Chain Management Leader for Zoetis in Brussels and the Site Leader for Zoetis in Charles City, IA, before moving to California as the Site General Manager for Teva Pharmaceuticals in Irvine.
ISPE Women in Pharma® will provide women in the pharmaceutical industry a forum for connecting and collaborating on technical and career advancement topics and provide an opportunity for women to speak, deliver technical presentations, and contribute to panel discussions. A community of WIP mentors, resources across all levels, and educational sessions will be an enabler for career success and work-life balance.
